All,

I have removed the mine claims, public lands, and parcel data from the Site Viewer. These data were from San Juan County and have served their purpose. If we ever need to add these data back into the viewer, then I can easily do that.

The 2015 sampling locations are being revised and should be completed this week.

I would stay away from ownership data that we don't have much confidence in. We want the data/information that we put into the web viewer to be useful to those that will be using the web viewer.

Relative to the claims, yes. Accurate in general – doubtful.

Do you think those are more accurate?

Hi Liz,

It's not surprising that mine claim data is not correct. I can certainly remove it. Do you still want the parcel and public lands layers to remain?

Hi John,

As you know, we were down in Silverton last week doing property searches. The GIS layer for mining claims is significantly wrong. It may be a projection error, who knows. I would like to have the Claim Layer removed before we start sending the WebViewer out to folks. I don't want the layer to be mis-understood as being in the correct location. And I don't want the viewer to be sent out into the public realm with the incorrect info, in case we get people saying we did work or sampled on their property, when it wasn't theirs.

Let me know your thoughts on this.

Liz

All,

I have updated the Site viewer with the data used in the property analysis I did yesterday. I also added the NAIP 2011 imagery.
